This Christian mission travelogue through South America was published in 1915. From the Introduction: Through Five Republics on Horseback has all the elements of a great missionary book. It is written by an author who is an eye-witness of practically all that he records, and one who by his explorations and travels has won for himself the title of the Livingstone of South America. The scenes depicted by the writer and the glimpses into the social, political and religious conditions prevailing in the Republics in the great Southern continent are of thrilling interest to all lovers of mankind. We doubt if there is another book in print that within the compass of three hundred pages begins to give as much valuable information as is contained in Mr. Rays volume. The writer wields a facile pen, and every page glows with the passion of a man on fire with zeal for the evangelization of the great Neglected Continent. We are sure that no one can read this book and be indifferent to the claims of South America upon the Christian Church of this generation. To those who desire to learn just what the fruits of Romanism as a system are, when left to itself and uninfluenced by Protestantism, this book will prove a real eye-opener. We doubt if any Christian man, after reading Through Five Republics on Horseback, will any longer conclude that Romanism is good enough for Romanists and that Missions to Roman Catholic countries are an impertinence. We trust the book will awaken a great interest in the evangelization of the Latin Republics of South America. Of course, this volume will have interest for others besides missionary enthusiasts. Apart from...
