Not illustrated. 1894 Excerpt: . since Nasmyth and Carpenter s plates were copied from a model globe of the Moon, made by them in relief from their long-continued series of Moon drawings obtained at the telescope. I have myself twice drawn Tycho with the 6-inch telescope of the Prague Observatory. The first drawing was on 1884, April 4, with the shadows thrown to the east (see Prager Astr. Beob., v. 1884), and the second was on 1885, January 8, with the shadows thrown westwards (see Prager Astr. Beob., v. 18851887). T.) is in the possession of the Prague Observatory, and has been used to verify the reality of the finer details which appear on the photographs, but which are not to be found on Schmidt s atlas. The latter negative I shall call II, the former I. A rigid comparison of I and II was very conveniently made, as follows: A 24-fold enlarged dia-positive was made from each negative, taking pains that the two enlargements should be of like sharpness and intensity. Each of these...
