Excerpt: . CHAPTER XXVI HOW THE NEWS REACHED ENGLAND-- AND NAPOLEON THE battle was fought on Monday, the 21st of October. The first authentic news of it, and of Nelson's death, only reached London on Wednesday, the 6th of November, at one in the morning. A rumour, based on a newspaper paragraph, that there had been fighting at Cadiz, had been current in London for three or four days previously, but nothing was known as to what had taken place. In the Morning Post of the 2nd of November an editorial note stated that it was reported, on the authority of letters said to have been received from Lisbon, that Lord Nelson had succeeded in destroying a great part of the Combined Fleet in the harbour of Cadiz ; but the Editor felt it his duty to add this: Though from the enterprising character...
