Excerpt: . . . 11 tionalize what is still an unfamiliar kind of warfare in the Military Services. I think that is a major effort or a major objective of his thats animating his actions in terms of some of these changes in the programs in the budget. But I think equally important, and this came out in his Foreign Affairs piece about a balanced defense are, what I believe to be, three emerging challenges to our security that perhaps havent been receiving the attention they deserve. One is the growing risk we are incurring and likely going to continue to incur in terms of our ability to project military power into two areas of vital interest. One is East Asia as a consequence of the Chinese ongoing devel-opment of what they call Assassins Mace, military capabilities that are designed to push us progressively further and further away from their coast, uncovering key allies that we...
